WEEKLY SHORT STORY

TRIAL MATES.

By Izola Forrester.

"There's a misdeal," said Nita wickily, as she accepted Howell's aid in mounting.

He had hardly heard her. Ahead just disappearing up the long winding trail, were two figures on horseback. Nita's big sister, Beth Rathburn, and young Crittenden. There surely was a misdeal.

Howell swung into his saddle and rode beside the trial mate that chance had given him, totally unconscious of her own appealing charm and most excellent horsemanship.

And ahead of them lay a ride of three hours—three hours of inevitable tete-a-tete companionship. Howell knew that in those three hours all the chances of happiness he possessed.

He had accepted Crittenden's invitation to spend two weeks at his ranch merely on the hope of meeting Beth Rathburn again. This after she had flatly refused him twice during the winter season. But, somehow, man fashion, he had reasoned if he could only find her out in these gorgeous mountains he might be able to touch the real inner nature he believed lay beneath her girlish frivolity and waywardness.

This had been his first chance, after two days, for a quiet, intimate talk with her, and somehow Beth Crittenden rode in his place beside her at the crucial moment.

"My girl needs tightening!" Nita's voice recalled him to his duty.

The girl leaped over and watched him as he cinched up. And then she looked beyond his bowed head, off toward two figures barely visible at the turn of the winding path up the valley. Suddenly she spoke impulsively.

"I'm awfully sorry you didn't get Beth, but you can't any more, you know. Bob's terribly jealous, and really he has a say-so now."

Howell's eyes darkened. They looked up at the tender expressive face with quick suspicion.

"You mean?"

"They're engaged," said Nita, simply. "Last night, on the veranda. Beth told me when she came to bed. O, please—please hold him—"

Howell made a leap toward the bride, but the pony plunged and backed, half turning about, and rearing.

From the ground where it stood there wiggled a snake back into the mesquite. Nita walloping with one hand to the saddle-horn, and gripping with all her force, trying to keep her seat. The pony broke suddenly and ran madly, while Howell swung into his own saddle and gave chase.

The race lay in an opposite direction from the rest of the party. There was no chance to call for help. Straightaway up the mountain path went the bride, and Howell's tips were pressed close as he watched the uncertain swaying of the slender figure on the high Mexican saddle.

Something woke to life at that tense moment in Howell's heart. Something that beat back the anger and hurt pride at Beth's coquetry. Putting his spurs to his horse, he gained steadily on the frightened pony and rode alongside just as Nita was falling.

There was no chance to check the pony. All he could do was to catch her as she fell, while he slipped off his own horse. So for a minute he held her in his arms like a hurt child, and wondered why she did not faint. Instead, she smiled up at him with the same laughing mischief in her long-lashed brown eyes.

"I'm not hurt a bit, Mr. Howell. You don't need to hold me any longer." "There's sure to be a nervous shock," said Howell, gravely. "Are you sure you can stand alone?"

"Try me," she laughed. He lifted her up to his own saddle. The pony had stopped a short distance away, and was cropping grass.

"Aren't we lost?" she asked. "Completely. I haven't any idea of these trails, or where they lead to. I shall hobble the horses and make a tepee of poles, and go hunt a bear. That's the usual procedure, isn't it? We're real trial mates, now."

She smiled wistfully.

"I am hungry. Aren't you, Mr. Howell?"

"First name is Paul."

"I might have called you by it if you had been my brother-in-law," she re-

SPANISH SWINDLER IS UNDER ARREST

MADRID, SPAIN.—SPECIAL.—

Eduardo de Blanco Colley, the Spanish notelman, who has for some twenty-five years been languishing in a Spanish prison in Madrid, and who has been appealing by means of several thousands of letters annually to various persons in Virginia to come to his relief and to save his "fair young daughter and get a large share of an immense estate, which is contained in a bank, a secret, and a reward for taking care of and educating the daughter," has been captured. He is in jail.

This is the news which reached the city today from Charles L. Hoover, the American consul at Madrid. Just how the swindler, the man who has been fleeing the guileless American public for years, had been taken into custody is not stated, but the writer states that the "particular swindler who sent them out has just been arrested."

There are scores and scores of hundreds of men in this city who have received these letters, and they have, as a rule, passed them up and paid no attention to them. Several times the receivers of the letters have sent to the chief of the secret service of the United States, to be advised that there was no way whereby the man could be reached. As a matter of fact, there appears to have been a duly organized syndicate for the handling of the American dollars that have been so long in the making, the fact that the swindle has been kept up for years proves that it has been a money maker.

Sam Bigger, Sheriff, several months ago D. T. Colley, the messenger in the State Corporation Commission, received one of the letters, giving the usual details of the unfortunate man, and the grandee finds himself and who is anxious as to the fate of his beautiful daughter, and rubbish about being a swindler of a large fortune which the government will confiscate because of the fact that the writer is charged with a political offense.

So far as is known here, the Pope has not been seriously ill of late, although it has been feared for many years that he had the heart disease and that his end might come unexpectedly. He has also been a sufferer from rheumatism, and it is known that earnest work has borne severely on his physical condition. Still it is hoped that he may yet be spared for many years.

Bishop O'Connell had an interview with the Pope last December. On that occasion he noticed some physical change in the holy father, who seemed as strong as he had been at the time he left his office, but there was no diminution in his mental vigor. In fact, he showed a most astonishing grasp of business and a keenness of mind which Bishop O'Connell had discussed with him a long time.

"He took these things up with me," said Bishop O'Connell this morning, "as if our conversation had been interrupted only a few hours before. He is not a man to worry about details, but his memory is so good that he can recall wonderful. Apparently he forgets nothing of real importance."

Moreover, his mind is positive when he takes a stand, though he is the most affable and approachable of men as his office and manner is beautiful and proves most reassuring to those who come into his presence. He thinks he has devoted himself to the religious side of his office. In years ago some of the Pope's needs have been to devote much time to what I may call their practical matters which Bishop O'Connell had discussed with him a long time.

Today the following letter came to Mr. Colley, being a verbatim showing that after a lapse of many years the Spanish authorities have got things to the point where they are operating:

American Consular Service, Madrid, Spain, March 29, 1912.

Dear Sir—In reply to your letter of recent date, I am glad to inform you that the whole matter is a swindle and an attempt to obtain money from you by false pretences.

There has been in existence in this country for many years an apparently well organized band of swindlers who work upon the same lines that have been used in the attempt to deceive you. You may be sure that I do not know of any such thing, and I do not wish to be connected with it in any way.

Many thanks for the papers. We need them just at this moment as the particular swindler who sent them out has just been arrested. H.

LITTLE HOPE OF RECOVERY

Kidney Trouble Had Reached Serious Stage.

W. L. Jackson, Parkersburg, W. Va., says: "Twenty years ago, driving affected my kidneys and brought on such a pain in my back, I could scarcely get around. The urine became discolored and I had to get up ten or twelve times at night. Doctors failed to help me and I was pros- trated in bed with little hope of recovery. Doan's Kidney Pills saved my life. For eight years I have been free from kidney trouble."

There were equally in the dark about the accuracy of the rumors. Bishop O'Connell, who is perfectly familiar with the workings of the Vatican, was certain, as soon as he was informed that the report first came from Madrid, that the mistake had been made. He felt sure that authoritative information would have been given out promptly at the Vatican, and the holy father actually passed away.

So far as is known here, the Pope has not been seriously ill of late, although it has been feared for many years that he had the heart disease and that his end might come unexpectedly. ## ROOSEVELT WINS DELEGATES MAINE

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—SPECIAL.—

The Republican party of New York State, in convention here Wednesday, declared for the renomination of President William H. Taft, and passed a resolution urging the State's delegation to the Chicago National Convention to vote to that end.

The Taft presidential plank found an opponent only in City Comptroller William A. Roosevelt, of New York, a Roosevelt delegate, who made a vigorous speech against the platform, and declared that President Taft should not be re-elected. The platform was adopted by a vote of 1,015 delegates.

Vermont Divided.

MONTEPELIER, VT.—SPECIAL.—Of the eight Vermont delegates to the Republican convention at Chicago, two district delegates will go instructed for Taft, and two for Roosevelt. The two delegates for Roosevelt, unpledged, although the State convention Thursday endorsed President Taft's administration. All four delegates expressed a strong desire for his renomination. The platform demands the principles of recall of judges and of decisions. The suggestion of a review of the decisions of the court in a particular case is declared to be "a subtle and dangerous attempt upon the foundation of free government itself."

Maine for Roosevelt.

BANGOR, ME.—SPECIAL.—Endorsing his administration was the consolation given President Taft by the State convention here. Colonel Roosevelt won 739 instructed delegates to 497 for the President. All the district delegates for the President, and thus he will have Maine's twelve votes.

In the district conventions, which did not instruct the delegates, resolutions were adopted by a practically pledging their support to Roosevelt. The platform adopted for the State election favors presidential primaries and demands a further strengthening of the liquor law as it now stands.

Kentucky in Doubt.

LOUISVILLE, Ky.—SPECIAL.—Failure on the part of the committee on credentials to report caused the adjournment of the State Republican convention here today without any action being taken. A stormy session was held last night by the credentials committee. The resolutions which were adopted by the Taft and Roosevelt factions. No announcement was made by the committee as to what the report will be.

At yesterday's session of the convention Senator W. C. Bradley was elected temporary chairman and the entire organization favors President Taft. However, Sam R. Baker, leader of Taft forces from the Seventh District, declared that in all probability the delegation from there will be split between the Roosevelt forces half the vote in the convention.

There is a vagueness about the lines of the Taft forces throw out the Roosevelt forces. The convention will be held by the Taft forces, and the Roosevelt forces will be sent to the national convention, for Roosevelt and twenty-three for Taft.

Washington, D. C.—SPECIAL.—While the Taft forces profess entire confidence in their ability to pick the Republican platform for President Taft, there developed today a strong feeling that only the selection of another candidate will promise success to the Republican national ticket this fall.

The grooming of dark horses has already begun. Two most prominently mentioned are Senator Cummins, of Iowa, and Justice Hughes, of the United States Supreme Court. Neither is expected to be nominated.

There is no expectation that the Chicago convention can be stampeded to either of these men, but those who believe that the party would be hopelessly split, if either Taft or Roosevelt were nominated, hope that a compromise can be reached.

It is believed that the selection of a dark horse will be favorable to both wings of the party, can be reached in the event that President Taft voluntarily retires in the interest of the party.

With the Republicans split into three divisions, one favoring President Taft, another following Senator La Follette and the third clinging to the Roosevelt bandwagon, the prospect of a dark horse nomination even after a long, hard fight, is becoming more and more remote, according to the national leaders.

Those who favor a compromise are seeking a candidate who blends the principles of progressiveness with those of conservatism in a degree which will appease voters of all factions.

There are a number of leaders, however, who fear that this is next to impossible.

EXPRESS WONDER AT BEACH STORY

AIKEN, S. C.—SPECIAL.—Upon what information Special Agent Baughan based his charge that Frederick O. Baughan, the millionaire New York clubman, attempted to stab his beautiful wife to death in a jealous rage is a question puzzling wealthy members of the winter colony.

As Pearl Hammond, the colored woman who saw Mrs. Beach's assailant, refuses to give information to the authorities it is not known on what evidence Baughan was based in his vivid description of what took place on the night of the attack.

Baughan said today that statements made by Beach and his wife will play an important part in the prosecution.

He alleges that the husband and wife told conflicting stories.

South Will Now GET THE FLOOD

LOS ANGELES, CAL. SPECIAL.—Information showing the existence of a plot to overthrow the government of California, Central America, involving the United States, has been placed in the hands of local officials.

This information, which caused telegrams to be immediately dispatched to the United States, was furnished by General Jagard, who is here in the interest of his government.

According to the meager details obtainable, several prominent Californians are preparing to send into Central America a large force of men, backed by many thousands of dollars.

A large steamer is said to have been chartered and plans are now under way to enlist men for the expedition.

SWEET SLUMBER BROUGHT BACK

Astoria, Ore.—SPECIAL.—

Beatty, the aviator, flew from Nassau Boulevard field to the Mineola, L. I., courthouse yesterday to answer a summons charging him with speeding an automobile at Floral Park on March 27th. Justice Weeks fined Beatty $10.

"Now, Judge," said Beatty, "come with me and I'll give you a ride. I'll take you up in the air for about ten minutes and show you some real speed."

"No, thanks, not now," said the justice. "I wouldn't care to go now, anyway, as you might have it in for me."

The sky pilot then flew back to Nassau Boulevard.

Mistaken Kindness.

The servants were abed and the doctor answered the bell himself. A colored man stood on the steps holding a large package.

"Is Miss Matilda, the cook, at home, sah?" asked the man.

"Yes, but she has retired," returned the doctor.

"Can I lead dis to her, sah?" "Certainly," said the doctor.

He took the bundle from which flowers and buds were protruding and after bidding the man good night, he carried it to the kitchen, where he deposited it, paper and all, in a pan of water.

The doctor thought nothing more of the affair until he heard Matilda's angry voice raised in conversation with the maid.

"Ef I had de pesson beah," cried the cook, "dat put mah new spring hat on my yer dishpan I'd scald 'em 'til sho'!"

Some Untidy New Hats.

There is a pronounced air of untidiness about the hats of the moment—that is to say, the really new models. Happily, the neat little hats of last season have been adapted and brought up to the date of the line without losing any of their quaintness. Nevertheless Paris is cultivating with enthusiasm—as she cultivates everything—her raggedness which might be described as "understudy" as embodying some of the less commendable characteristics of the English school of dress.

There is a vagueness about the lines of the hats of the moment, and one finds it difficult to decide the category in which to place the model. There is, for example, a weird specimen in black chip straw, with a Tam O' Shanter crown as floppy as the black chip straw will permit it to be, tumblingly plaited into a brim which appears to be made of twisted wire, the direction it wishes to take. It affects a compromise by commencing to turn down at the crown, but suddenly curling up at the edge, the brim is wider at one side and toward the back.

This brim is outlined with grayish brown edging of ostrich feather; a long plume of the ostrich rears itself wildly toward the back. It is, however, flattened upon the head as though a promising hat had met with an untidy end in a storm or beneath the weight of an unexpected missile.

There are quaint little bonnet-like toques with "ragged-looking" feathers in gathered and corded tatters twisted round them. One was rather adorned in fine white straw, with a narrow brim which turned up back and toward the side, and the edge with the narrowest possible piping of green. At one side of the rounded crown was a large silk arrangement, which, anyone might have been forgiven for mistaking for a large green artichoke.

Milady's Mirror.

Washing combs in water soon causes them to warp and break. A stiff, dry nail-brush is a good cleanser, and will remove the dirt without marring the finish.

When washing your powder chamois do not rinse out all the soap or it will dry hard and harsh. Use a good soft soap and do not wring it out in water. This will bring forward the natural oils in the leather and it will be soft and pliable as new.

While the effect of the constant use of liquid powder is often extremely unpleasant, it may be used at intervals without fear of injury to the skin. One of the best pearl white powders is made by the mixing of 14 ounces of bismuth subcarbonate with enough water to make six ounces in all. Rain water should be used if possible. The bottle must always be shaken well before applying the powder. Be careful not to apply it too generously or it will give the effect of facial enamel.

The Coin Handkerchief.

The little novelty is an attractive little novelty, so invaluable that it seems difficult to explain why it was never thought of before. It is arranged for safety in carrying the bits of silver for collection at church or for street car fare, at a time when one would wish to dispense with the necessity of carrying a purse.

One of these handkerchiefs in a nine-inch square of fine lawn, hemstitched by hand and edged with a narrow baby Irish edge, crocheted on the fabric. Two baby Irish roses, wrought in No. 100 cotton, with a row of openwork or two around them, to bring it to a diameter rather larger than a half dollar, are set back to back in one corner of the handkerchief.

They are arranged exactly together, but without the fabric being cut between them. One is firmly stitched
